How to Locate Published and Unpublished Tests

Before starting your quest, determine, if possible, whether you need a published test or an unpublished test. Published instruments are those sold by commercial publishers. CSU Stanislaus Library does not maintain a library of published tests. You may need to purchase from the publisher unless available elsewhere on campus.

Unpublished (or noncommercial) instruments are those found primarily in journals but also in ERIC documents, books, or directly from the author. Even if these are not commercially available for purchase, they may be copyrighted. The American Psychological Association (APA) cautions all users of unpublished tests to be aware of ethical considerations. APA states that the researcher must contact the author for permission if the test is copyrighted and obtain that permission in writing. "The fact that a scale can be readily obtained does not mean that researchers have permission to use it." (Beere, Gender Roles, 1990, p. 12).

TESTS IN JOURNALS

Journal articles can identify both relevant published and unpublished tests; they are excellent sources for very current unpublished tests or for discovering revisions of existing instruments. If you are lucky, you may find the unpublished test in its entirety. Utilize appropriate electronic databases when searching for a test in the journal literature.

Use relevant synonyms when searching for a test by topic, i.e., test(s), scale(s), questionnaire(s), survey(s), measure(s), measurement(s), inventory, etc.

Search by specific test name and acronym if applicable.

ERIC

For best results in locating an entire test, try ERIC's document type number. Not full-proof but extremely helpful. Document type code (DTC) for tests/questionnaires is 160. Combine that with your subject. Example in SilverPlatter's ERIC:

DTC=160 and parent participation

PsycINFO

Use appropriate descriptors in conjunction with the classification code (cc=2221-2229). Again, not full-proof. Descriptors may be more useful than the code(s).
